

THE INBETWEENERS MOVIE IS SET TO BE A HIT STATESIDE

4th September 2011

THE Inbetweeners are set to make it big in Hollywood.

The geeky movie, which smashed UK box office records and follows the cringe-making antics of Will, Simon, Jay and Neil, goes on release in the US in November.

Film sales company IM Global is currently fielding offers from excited buyers.

The lads, played by Simon Bird (Will), Joe Thomas (Simon), James Buckley (Jay) and Blake Harrison (Neil), are set to have a lot of fun in Tinseltown.

A source at IM Global said: "The movie has been doing extremely well in the UK and we are very pleased with the results.

"The sales team is currently in discussions with US distributors regarding this film."

The movie features the boys on their first parent-free holiday abroad in Malia, Crete.

Speaking about the original TV show, Simon, 27, said: "We never thought we'd do another series after the first, so for us to make a movie, we just never thought that would happen.

"I honestly thought the first TV series would get cancelled halfway through. It's totally unexpected.

"It was a bit like, 'How long can this continue?'

"It's great we've been allowed to carry on."
