

Dimension Picks Up U.S. Rights to 'Angry Little God'

"Last Exorcism" helmer Daniel Stamm co-wrote the script and will direct the thriller, an English-language remake of the Thai movie "13: Game of Death." UPDATE: Indie actor Mark Webber is in early talks to star in the movie.

11:03 AM PDT 8/21/2012 by Borys Kit

Dimension Films has picked up the U.S. rights to Angry Little God, a psychological thriller from Daniel Stamm, the director of The Last Exorcism.

IM Global will finance and produce the pic, a remake of a Thai thriller titled 13: Game of Death.

Brian Kavanaugh-Jones of Automatik and Kiki Miyake are also producing. Jason Blum of Blumhouse is executive producing with Somsak Techaratanaprasert.

The original movie followed an indebted man who gets a mysterious phone call telling him he's on a hidden camera game show while also offering him a fortune if he completes thirteen tasks. The man accepts the challenge but is soon over his head as each task is more horrifying than the last.

Stamm, repped by CAA and Underground, and his writing partner David Birke wrote the script. Stamm will direct. No start date or release date was given.

UPDATE: Rising indie actor Mark Webber, who he best known for playing Stephen Stills in Scott Pilgrim vs. the World, is in early talks to star in the movie. Webber had three movies at Sundance this year, including The End of Love, which he wrote, directed, and co-starred in. He is repped by Innovative Artists.